The spirit of secession is a fierce and terrible spirit. If the people of Alabama wish to deny the sports. If the people of Alabama wish to deny to persons not slave owners the right of speaking to daves, why don't they have a law enacted to that effect?

We deeply and sincerly desire conciliation and compromise between the examperated Cotton States and the examperated North and between the Cotton States and the Pederal Government, but, in order to that, both sides must pause. Some of the Cotton States, by their rash seizure upon the Government furifications, arms, and other public property, even whilst having mails transported for them at the Government's expense and availing themselves of all possible Government facilities, appear to be precipitating a condition of things that can end only in civil war, and probably a more terrific civil war than is as yet recorded in the world's history.

CF Reckless as South Carolina has seemed to be m some things, she has certainly pursued a very timid and hesitating course in others. When her Convention passed a post all ordinance requiring the postmasters throughout the State to regard themselves as officers of the independent State of South Carolina and to render their accounts and no penalty specified for its infraction. Those who read that ordinance to go into operation and no penalty specified for its infraction. Those who read that ordinance suggested at once that it manifested an exaston of responsibility and was not intended to be enforced until a corson.

In reply to an inquiry from Postmaster General Holt, who has manifested a great deal of energy in this emergency, the postmaster at vention consulting on doing likewise, and other than the still considered himself or States are threatening, yet the Enquirer can reponsible to the Federal Government and almost see it—"feels it in its bones"—that a would send in his quarterly account accordingly, and he even inclosed a copy of the Convention's ordinance to shewthat it did not prohibit render of opposition to a compromise and in
